FIGHTING TALK ON U. S. ISSUES ASKED BY GOP

Candidate Told To Clear Suspicion Of New Deal Leanings

SUPPORT IS PROMISED

Failure Of Bricker Boom Leaves Mid-West Group Without Candidate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Wendell L. Willkie, it was learned today, is being strongly urged to break openly with President Roosevelt on domestic issues as a demonstration of his adherence to GOP principles.

This advice is coming from several powerful Mid-Western party leaders who have not been counted in the Willkie camp since his defeat three years ago by President Roosevelt, but who have recently conferred with him in his role as titular head of the Republican party.

They have told Willkie that he can gain a sizeable bloc of delegates in the ballistics if he will make a series of fighting speeches that will, as one leader put it to Willkie, clear him of the "suspicion" that his election would mean "four more years of the New Deal."

These leaders base their advice on two contentions:

1. That the possibility Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York may be the GOP candidate has not won the fancy of party chieftains in the farm belt primarily because of Dewey's eastern affiliations.

2. That the failure of the boom for Gov. John Bricker of Ohio to catch hold has left a number of mid-west leaders without a candidate to rally behind.

May Reveal Stand

Whether Willkie is going to follow their advice may be learned when he makes a scheduled speech in St. Louis October 12. His statements to a news conference in San Francisco yesterday did little, if anything, to indicate which way he will turn.

"If the Republican party," said Willkie, "will adopt the liberal principles for which I stand in our domestic economy and in our relations with the rest of the world, I will devote every minute of my time either as a candidate or as a worker in the ranks."

The scheduled St. Louis speech is an outgrowth of similar statements. More than a month ago a group of former Willkie supporters in Missouri headed by Grover Dalton, state chairman, and Edgar M. Queney of St. Louis, delivered nine questions to Willkie with a demand that he clarify his position by answering them. Willkie's only answer was a promise to make the October 12 speech on a subject of his own choosing.

Northwest Africa Seen As Mighty Base for Direct Raids on Reich

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Oct. 2—Northwest Africa, from which the United Nations launched their first European invasion pointed at Berlin, today loomed as a mighty base for direct air operations against the Reich in the wake of the first African-based raids on Germany and Austria.

MEAT OUTLOOK REMAINS DARK

Ration Point Values Not To Be Reduced Despite Gain In Supplies

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Government food authorities today disclosed that recent heavy increases in total U. S. meat production will not permit increased rations for the civilian dinner table.

Ration point values will not be lowered to allow consumers to purchase more meat products with their red food stamps.

Although the war meat board reported that meat production increased four percent for the week ending September 25 above the preceding week and 16 percent over the same week a year ago, huge government purchases are being made for military and lend-lease stockpiles.

Uncle Sam will buy, an OPA spokesman pointed out, nearly double the amount of major meat items in October that he bought in September.

During the week ending September 25, according to the meat board statistics, the nation's packing plants processed 335 million pounds of meat, compared with only 288 million pounds the same week a year ago.

The spokesman said that the government buys heavily during peak producing seasons, putting the purchases in storage warehouses for future army and lend-lease use. During lean producing periods, it was explained, the government "lays off" the meat supply, allowing almost the whole output to reach civilian channels.

This procedure holds true with butter purchases as well. According to the war food administration this is a "leveling off process" to assure civilians of a steady flow—if not so large—of commodities.

Salable receipts at the nation's 12 leading markets as of yesterday showed 292,200 head of cattle received, compared with 273,400 a year ago. For the same period, hog receipts totaled 335,400 compared with 235,800 a year ago, while sheep and lamb receipts also should increase.

COUNTY PASSES MILLION MARK IN BOND DRIVE

Solicitors Active On Last Day Striving To Reach Goal Of $1,331,000

CHAIRMAN OPTIMISTIC

State, Nation Over Top—Pickaway, Perry Lag In District

Pickaway county's Third War Loan campaign passed the million dollar mark Saturday and was moving on toward its goal of $1,331,000 during the day.

Clark Will, general chairman, said his latest tabulation showed the total to be $1,002,000 with 2,384 individual subscriptions listed, but he added that many thousands more have probably been sold but not yet reported.

"The work our solicitors do Saturday will determine whether or not we go over the top," the drive chief said.

"Many bonds have been sold that have not been reported, and we are hopeful that this total and the number to be sold during the afternoon and evening will give us our quota. We still have a long way to go, though," Mr. Will said.

The War Loan chairman said Friday that the "goal is in sight", showing optimism for the first time since the campaign started two weeks ago. The county dragged along far behind other counties in the central Ohio region until the middle of the last week when the volume of sales started to increase with the total of subscriptions mounting hourly.

Saturday is the final day for sale of all issues available during the Third War Loan drive except Series E, F and G bonds. Solicitors have two weeks in which to complete their reports on sale of the latter three issues. However, no concerted sales effort is permitted after Saturday midnight. The drive was expected to be ended last Thursday, September 30, but the U. S. Treasury department approved an extension of two days.

The nation and the state have gone over the top, and the Federal Reserve district in which Pickaway county is located has also reached its quota, but drive chiefs are now concentrating their efforts to put all counties over the top. Pickaway and Perry counties are the last two in the district which have not reached the amount expected of them.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Sales in the fifteen billion dollar war loan drive which ends tonight reached a total of 16 billion, 220 million dollars last night. The treasury announced that the sales increased 688 million dollars from Thursday to last night. Thirteen states have reached or surpassed their goals.

MARSHALL MAY SOON SET UP LONDON OFFICE

LONDON, Oct. 2—Reports persisted throughout London today that American chief of staff Gen. George C. Marshall would be named commander-in-chief of Allied global forces and would establish his offices in the British capital.

A small army of workmen, decorators and charwomen were concluding the preparation of quarters in a strategically-situated London building in which it is said Marshall's offices will be located.

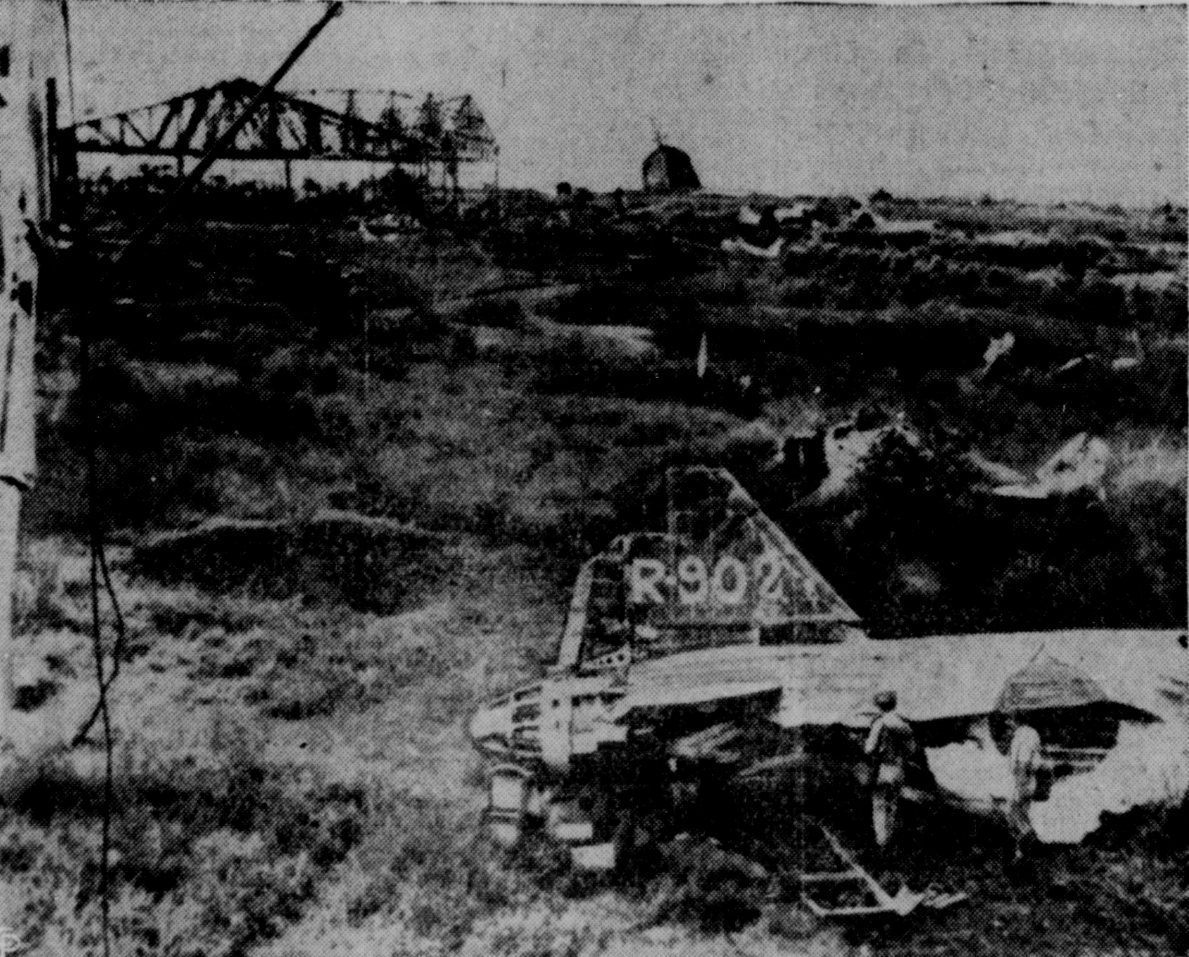

Preparations reportedly include installations of private direct-line telephones to high-ranking diplomatic, military and political officials, and provisions to streamline staff-work as much as possible.

Concerning the prospect of an American generalissimo getting command of such global forces, the Lord of Queenborough said that "a slight feeling of chagrin . . . won't prevent the English . . . from greeting with concurrence any change . . . which promises to make . . . more vigorous prosecution of the war."

His lordship said, though, that the theatres of war are in two hemispheres which are so different that one would assume a generalissimo for forces in the Atlantic, and another for Pacific forces would have been more workable.

There's no doubt that they (the three United Nations leaders) would have met long since except for one fact. "Marshal Stalin is chief of the Russian high command and the military situation has been such all Summer that he has had to make daily decisions. "There will be complete accord among these three great leaders. It is of vital interest to each of these three countries that they do agree and it would be suicidal not to agree. . . . We've got to trust the Russians and they've got to trust us," Davies added.

TRIPPOWER TALKS HOLD PEACE KEY

Lack Of Understanding With Russia Seen As Seeds Of War

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—A highly authoritative American diplomatic observer in Washington expressed the belief today that the seeds of a third world war will be sown if the United States and Great Britain fail to reach a satisfactory understanding with Russia in the forthcoming tripower talks.

This source, who is one of the most qualified American observers in the diplomatic field, said the destiny of the world undoubtedly depends on the outcome of the impending meeting of the American, British and Soviet foreign ministers.

If that meeting is a success, the way will be paved for a conference between President Roosevelt, British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin for cooperation between the three major allied powers in the postwar period.

If the United States and Britain are unable to reach a satisfactory understanding with the Russians, the American diplomatic observer predicted Moscow will attempt to dominate the political future of Europe.

In that case, an eventual conflict is foreseen between Great Britain and Russia over the balance of power in Europe, with the United States probably drawn in to save the British again.

Some diplomatic observers believe that Russia will emerge from this war as the dominant power in Europe. The possibility is seen that the European political current also will swing strongly toward Moscow.

DR. C. J. ROCKEY SUFFERS BROKEN NECK IN FALL

Dr. C. J. Rockey, prominent Ashville dentist, suffered severe injuries Friday in a fall at his farm at Little Walnut. Taken to Grant hospital, Columbus, x-rays revealed a fractured vertebra of the neck.

Mrs. Glenn I. Nickerson, South Court street, a sister-in-law, said members of the dentist's family have not been informed of the exact seriousness of the injury.

Dr. Rockey is believed to have fallen from a fence. He was alone at the time of the accident. The Rockey farm is the property formerly owned by the estate of the late David Six.

MINE SWEEPERS SINKING BRINGS U. S. LOSS TO 119

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—The total of American naval vessels sunk since beginning of the war was raised to 119 today when the navy announced the U. S. mine layer Skill was sent to the bottom of the Gulf of Salerno September 25.

The Skill went down after an underwater explosion. The navy has not been informed whether the vessel hit an enemy mine or was struck by a torpedo.

Lieut. Comdr. Edward J. Keven, 40, skipper of the Skill, is listed as missing. The Skill, built as a minesweeper in 1942, carried a normal complement of from 65 to 70 officers and men, but there was no estimate on the number of casualties.

The Skill is the second U. S. naval vessel announced as sunk in the invasion of the Italian mainland. The destroyer Rowan was sent to the bottom by enemy action in Italian waters September 11, two days after the American Fifth Army began its landing at Salerno.

GERMAN TOOL URGES ITALIANS TO FIGHT ALLIES

NEW YORK, Oct. 2—Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, minister of national defense in Italy's new puppet "republican Fascist government," urged Italian army and navy officers today to reorganize forces that can go on with the fight against the United Nations.

Graziani exhorted the officers to continued resistance at a meeting he had ordered them to attend in Rome. He shouted commands to "drive the hated Anglo-Saxon enemy back to the shores of Africa."

A broadcast of the speech from a recording by the Nazi-controlled Rome radio was heard by United States government monitors who said that Graziani's voice sometimes rose to a scream and his sentences were not always clear.

Graziani said at one point: "Return to the fight, comrades, side by side with our ally but under our own flag. At orders of our own leaders, shoulder to shoulder with (German) allied leaders, take our place solidly in the new forces that will arise as if by enchantment or by madness from the ruins of a few months—if you, if all of us unite our efforts and give our energy, our faith, our will."

The Rome radio later announced that 400 officers of the Plave division met after the meeting and "spontaneously decided to take their places within the new republican army."

NAZI RETREAT PACT DENIED

Rumors Spread By Huns To Intimidate Wavering Slave Nations

LONDON, Oct. 2—Informed circles in London today stated there was "not a vestige of truth" in rumors circulated to all British and American newspaper and press association clients by Reuters' News Agency today alleging "with all reserve" that the German retreat in Russia is being carried out by agreement.

For months, authoritative quarters pointed out, Nazi propagandists have stressed the possibility of a separate Russo-German peace although the exact opposite always has prevailed.

The Reuter dispatch was prefaced by a parenthetical memorandum to editors which said: "The following is placed at your disposal with all reserve for publication at your discretion. There is no confirmation of these reports from any source."

From there on, the dispatch said:

"Propaganda reports that the German retreat in Russia is being carried out in agreement with Russia and that Russia has promised Germany to stop advancing after a certain line has been reached are being circulated in Ankara."

"Rumors of a separate peace by agreement have been spread in various neutral capitals. It has been Germany's technique recently to inspire them and deny them. All have been baseless. It is now a case of Turkey being selected as a medium for rumor-spreading."

London quarters felt that Germany's real motive in spreading these rumors is to intimidate Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania, which are known to be anxious to get out of Berlin's grip, but would fear for their own future under a negotiated Russo-German peace.

CITY'S CLOCKS TURN BACK AT 3 A. M. SUNDAY

Circleville's clocks will be turned back one hour at 3 a. m. Sunday, October 3, to Central War Time, one hour slower than the present schedule.

All local churches will operate their services under the new schedule Sunday; schools, business houses and public offices will follow the schedule Monday.

Railroads, postoffice and other institutions which operate under federal regulations will continue the Eastern War Time policy.

HEAVY BOMBERS HIT NORTH AND SOUTH GERMANY

United Nations Land Forces Continue Advances On All Fronts

YANKS REPAIRING NAPLES

Allied Planes Sink Three Craft In 11 Vessel Jap Convoy

By International News Service Allied airmen were applying a two-way air treatment on the home territories of the Reich today, and United Nations forces moved relentlessly closer to Germany through advances in Italy and Russia.

Shortly after Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces captured the important west coast Italian port of Naples and begun turning it into a strong Allied base for an offensive northward toward Rome, and ultimately Berlin, heavy bombers struck at southern Germany and Austria from African bases.

And still later, Royal Air Force bombers, operating from British bases were reported over northern Germany last night. The air ministry reported that a "heavy attack" was carried out on the important rail and river town of Hagen in Westphalia.

Two RAF bombers were listed as missing from the raid which pummeled the important iron and steel-producing city at the junction of the Ennepe and Volme rivers.

Soar From Africa

The African-based bombers, operating for the first time from northwest African bases against the Reich soared over the Alps and pounded an unidentified target near Munich, birthplace of Nazism. Others struck at Messerschmitt factories at Wiener Neustadt, 25 miles south of Vienna.

Despite adverse weather conditions, Flying Fortresses reached their targets near Munich, while heavy four-motored Liberators hit the Wiener Neustadt area.

In Italy, Allied engineers started rehabilitation work on the battered city of Naples, which had been pillaged and set afire by the Nazis before its capture by the American Fifth Army.

Already units of the Fifth Army, under command of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, were reported moving northward from the Tyrrhenian port in pursuit of the fleeing Nazis.

SENATE TO GET INSIDE DOPE ON WAR PROGRESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—The secrets a committee of five senators learned on a 40,000-mile trip to the world battlefronts will be unfolded to the senate in an extraordinary executive session next week.

Senate leaders agreed today to hold the session, probably next Wednesday, on request of the members who have just returned.

Sen. Russell (D) Ga., chairman of the group, and Sens. Lodge (R) Mass.; Brewster (R) Maine; and Mead (D) N. Y., will frankly disclose to the senate information which might be of value to the enemy if made publicly.

The returning senators have already publicly called for a strengthening of American diplomatic forces overseas so that American interests in the war and postwar world can be more strongly represented.

They also have specifically pointed to some activities of the British which they believe should receive the attention of the government. These include the widespread dissemination of British subsidized news throughout the Middle East and the Orient in which more praise is heaped on Britain's part in the war than upon that of the United States.

The position of the nation in the postwar fight over air trade routes and possibility of obtaining more island bases in the Pacific, also will figure in the discussion.

The senators, who talked to both Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Admiral William F. Halsey in the Southwest Pacific are expected to give the "inside story" of the war against Japan.

Whether Willkie is going to follow their advice may be learned when he makes a scheduled speech in St. Louis October 12. His statements to a news conference in San Francisco yesterday did little, if anything, to indicate which way he will turn.

Northwest Africa Seen As Mighty Base for Direct Raids on Reich

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Oct. 2—Northwest Africa, from which the United Nations launched their first European invasion pointed at Berlin, today loomed as a mighty base for direct air operations against the Reich in the wake of the first African-based raids on Germany and Austria.

Four-engined Flying Fortresses and Liberator bombers, roaring over the towering Alps for the first time from the "dark continent", pounded targets near Munich and Vienna.

"The American Forts negotiated the longest flight from Northwest African bases when they covered an 1,800-mile round trip to unidentified targets in the Munich region.

Simultaneously, the Liberators attacked the Messerschmitt fighter factories at Wiener Neustadt, 25 miles south of Vienna, an official air communiqué revealed.

On both raids, the heavy bombers encountered enemy fighters, the communiqué indicated. However, there was no immediate official announcement regarding the raiders' losses, if any.

Results of both raids were not accurately observed, due to clouds that prevailed over the targets. Nevertheless, many airmen returning from the Wiener Neustadt assault said many of the bombs were seen falling in the target area.

The Liberators participating in the raid on the Messerschmitt plant consisted of planes of the Eighth United States Army Air Force, which ordinarily is based in Britain, but flying under command of the Northwest African Air Forces. Other participants included craft formerly with the Ninth Air Force in the Middle East.

Although American heavy bombers bombed targets in southern France and those from the Middle East have pounded Austrian objectives, yesterday's raids were the first made against the greater Reich by craft of the Northwest African Air Forces.

In raiding the targets near Munich, birthplace of Nazism, African-based bombers crossed the Alps for the first time. The 1,800-mile trip set a record for planes of the Northwest African Forces, but did not equal the 2,500-mile journey made by Liberators from the Middle East in their maiden raid on Wiener Neustadt last August.

Due to the great distance flown, it is most likely that the Liberators and Flying Fortresses were not escorted by Allied fighter craft.

(The Swiss government had been quoted in a Bern broadcast as announcing that "several" planes were shot down over eastern Switzerland at noon yesterday when Flying Fortresses engaged German fighters. One Fort was said to have been shot down by Swiss anti-aircraft fire.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Government food authorities today disclosed that recent heavy increases in total U. S. meat production will not permit increased rations for the civilian dinner table.

Ration point values will not be lowered to allow consumers to purchase more meat products with their red food stamps.

According to the war food administration this is a "leveling off process" to assure civilians of a steady flow—if not so large—of commodities.

Salable receipts at the nation's 12 leading markets as of yesterday showed 292,200 head of cattle received, compared with 273,400 a year ago. For the same period, hog receipts totaled 335,400 compared with 235,800 a year ago, while sheep and lamb receipts also should increase.

COUNTY PASSES MILLION MARK IN BOND DRIVE

Solicitors Active On Last Day Striving To Reach Goal Of $1,331,000

CHAIRMAN OPTIMISTIC

State, Nation Over Top—Pickaway, Perry Lag In District

Pickaway county's Third War Loan campaign passed the million dollar mark Saturday and was moving on toward its goal of $1,331,000 during the day.

Clark Will, general chairman, said his latest tabulation showed the total to be $1,002,000 with 2,384 individual subscriptions listed, but he added that many thousands more have probably been sold but not yet reported.

"The work our solicitors do Saturday will determine whether or not we go over the top," the drive chief said.

"Many bonds have been sold that have not been reported, and we are hopeful that this total and the number to be sold during the afternoon and evening will give us our quota. We still have a long way to go, though," Mr. Will said.

The War Loan chairman said Friday that the "goal is in sight", showing optimism for the first time since the campaign started two weeks ago. The county dragged along far behind other counties in the central Ohio region until the middle of the last week when the volume of sales started to increase with the total of subscriptions mounting hourly.

Saturday is the final day for sale of all issues available during the Third War Loan drive except Series E, F and G bonds. Solicitors have two weeks in which to complete their reports on sale of the latter three issues. However, no concerted sales effort is permitted after Saturday midnight. The drive was expected to be ended last Thursday, September 30, but the U. S. Treasury department approved an extension of two days.

The nation and the state have gone over the top, and the Federal Reserve district in which Pickaway county is located has also reached its quota, but drive chiefs are now concentrating their efforts to put all counties over the top. Pickaway and Perry counties are the last two in the district which have not reached the amount expected of them.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Sales in the fifteen billion dollar war loan drive which ends tonight reached a total of 16 billion, 220 million dollars last night.

The treasury announced that the sales increased 688 million dollars from Thursday to last night. Thirteen states have reached or surpassed their goals.

Rumors Spread By Huns To Intimidate Wavering Slave Nations

LONDON, Oct. 2—Informed circles in London today stated there was "not a vestige of truth" in rumors circulated to all British and American newspaper and press association clients by Reuters' News Agency today alleging "with all reserve" that the German retreat in Russia is being carried out by agreement.

For months, authoritative quarters pointed out, Nazi propagandists have stressed the possibility of a separate Russo-German peace although the exact opposite always has prevailed.

The Reuter dispatch was prefaced by a parenthetical memorandum to editors which said:

"The following is placed at your disposal with all reserve for publication at your discretion. There is no confirmation of these reports from any source."

From there on, the dispatch said:

"Propaganda reports that the German retreat in Russia is being carried out in agreement with Russia and that Russia has promised Germany to stop advancing after a certain line has been reached are being circulated in Ankara."

"Rumors of a separate peace by agreement have been spread in various neutral capitals. It has been Germany's technique recently to inspire them and deny them. All have been baseless. It is now a case of Turkey being selected as a medium for rumor-spreading."

London quarters felt that Germany's real motive in spreading these rumors is to intimidate Hungary, Bulgaria and Romania, which are known to be anxious to get out of Berlin's grip, but would fear for their own future under a negotiated Russo-German peace.

Circleville's clocks will be turned back one hour at 3 a. m. Sunday, October 3, to Central War Time, one hour slower than the present schedule.

All local churches will operate their services under the new schedule Sunday; schools, business houses and public offices will follow the schedule Monday.

Railroads, postoffice and other institutions which operate under federal regulations will continue the Eastern War Time policy.

HEAVY BOMBERS HIT NORTH AND SOUTH GERMANY

United Nations Land Forces Continue Advances On All Fronts

YANKS REPAIRING NAPLES

Allied Planes Sink Three Craft In 11 Vessel Jap Convoy

By International News Service Allied airmen were applying a two-way air treatment on the home territories of the Reich today, and United Nations forces moved relentlessly closer to Germany through advances in Italy and Russia.

Shortly after Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces captured the important west coast Italian port of Naples and begun turning it into a strong Allied base for an offensive northward toward Rome, and ultimately Berlin, heavy bombers struck at southern Germany and Austria from African bases.

And still later, Royal Air Force bombers, operating from British bases were reported over northern Germany last night. The air ministry reported that a "heavy attack" was carried out on the important rail and river town of Hagen in Westphalia.

Two RAF bombers were listed as missing from the raid which pummeled the important iron and steel-producing city at the junction of the Ennepe and Volme rivers.

Soar From Africa

The African-based bombers, operating for the first time from northwest African bases against the Reich soared over the Alps and pounded an unidentified target near Munich, birthplace of Nazism. Others struck at Messerschmitt factories at Wiener Neustadt, 25 miles south of Vienna.

Despite adverse weather conditions, Flying Fortresses reached their targets near Munich, while heavy four-motored Liberators hit the Wiener Neustadt area.

In Italy, Allied engineers started rehabilitation work on the battered city of Naples, which had been pillaged and set afire by the Nazis before its capture by the American Fifth Army.

Already units of the Fifth Army, under command of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark, were reported moving northward from the Tyrrhenian port in pursuit of the fleet.

SENATE TO GET INSIDE DOPE ON WAR PROGRESS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—The secrets a committee of five senators learned on a 40,000-mile trip to the world battlefronts will be unfolded to the senate in an extraordinary executive session next week.

Senate leaders agreed today to hold the session, probably next Wednesday, on request of the members who have just returned.

Sen. Russell (D) Ga., chairman of the group, and Sens. Lodge (R) Mass.; Brewster (R) Maine; and Mead (D) N. Y., will frankly disclose to the senate information which might be of value to the enemy if made publicly.

The returning senators have already publicly called for a strengthening of American diplomatic forces overseas so that American interests in the war and postwar world can be more strongly represented.

They also have specifically pointed to some activities of the British which they believe should receive the attention of the government. These include the widespread dissemination of British subsidized news throughout the Middle East and the Orient in which more praise is heaped on Britain's part in the war than upon that of the United States.

The position of the nation in the postwar fight over air trade routes and possibility of obtaining more island bases in the Pacific, also will figure in the discussion.

The senators, who talked to both Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Admiral William F. Halsey in the Southwest Pacific are expected to give the "inside story" of the war against Japan.

CARE IN TALK URGED ON ALL YANK FRIENDS

Information In Letters
May Be Valuable To Axis Agents

KEEP MUM, ARMY ADVISES

War Workers Also Urged
To Exercise Care In Discussing Jobs

The War department today urged families and friends of soldiers to exercise extreme caution in discussing the military status of an individual soldier lest by consolidation of information on individuals Axis agents may determine plans of a regiment, a division or even an entire army.

Soldiers have been taught the prime necessity for military security. For them and through them it is hoped that relatives and friends of these soldiers back home will take their cue and provide civilian security for military matters.

"The element of surprise counts heavily in every military operation and Axis agents are working desperately to learn when and where we will strike," Major General George V. Strong, assistant chief of staff, G-2 (Military Intelligence) said in discussing the necessity for guarding military security.

The War Department has asked and again asks the public to follow these three simple rules:

If you HEAR it from someone—don't repeat it.

If you SEE it yourself—don't repeat it.

If you READ it in newspapers or magazines or hear it on the radio then it's public property—and you may talk about it. Of course you mustn't repeat information you read in personal letters.

Rumors Quelled

Army intelligence officers and units report marked success in their efforts to obtain adherence to the first two rules. Rumors are being effectively quelled and there is less and less discussion of those things which are actually witnessed.

The War Department naturally doesn't concern itself with the first part of the third rule, but it now gives wide attention to the second part—the discussion of information revealed by a soldier in a personal letter to a relative or friend.

"No matter how hard we try to stop it there will be soldiers who feel it incumbent on them to tell their relatives and friends the kind of training they are undergoing, the kind of clothing they are receiving, the type of medicine they are furnished," General Strong said in discussing this phase of the rule. "They just do not seem to realize that this type of information when repeated eventually falls on enemy ears."

Locale Indicated

The type of training a soldier is given often indicates the locale in which that training will be used. The kind of clothing he is issued indicates the climatic conditions he may encounter when he goes overseas. The medicine also may reveal his destination as different kinds of medicine are known to be used to combat diseases in particular countries.

"It is imperative that those persons receiving this personal mail keep all information contained therein to themselves," General Strong said. "Information gathered from a handful of soldiers' relatives or friends may tip off the plan for an entire division. It all seems harmless and it is natural for a father or mother to want to tell what their boy is doing. They just fail to realize that in telling they are jeopardizing not only the boy they love but thousands of other boys, too."

Letters Censored

A few local newspapers, too, occasionally print information from personal letters of soldiers and often this information is furnished by the family of the soldier. Soldier letters are censored at their source, but only for home consumption—they are not censored for publication, as has been specifically pointed out to the press by the Office of Censorship in its "Code of Wartime Practices for the American Press."

Elimination of sabotage continues to be a paramount project of the Army's military intelligence units and in this connection the War Department admonishes war workers to be extremely careful in discussing their work. Detailed discussion of war plants is perilous. The dangers of such detailed discussion in print have been expressed to the press, local and metropolitan, by the "Code of Wartime Practices for the American Press."

It is the natural desire of every civilian war worker to let his fellow men and women know that he is doing his part in the war. Often in revealing the contribution he is making to the war effort that civilian oversteps the bounds of security and gives information which eventually becomes valuable to the enemy. At all war plants under the jurisdiction of the War Department employees are schooled in the importance of military

GEORGE CURTAIN WOUNDED DURING ITALIAN BATTLE

Corporal George Curtain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Curtain, South Scioto street, has been wounded in the Italian campaign. His parents received a letter Friday informing them that he had been wounded and another came Saturday telling them he had been removed from a war zone emergency hospital to a base hospital in North Africa.

The letter received Saturday was written in young Curtain's own hand, and said that his wound was not serious. "He told us to not worry," Mr. Curtain said, "that he would be out of the hospital soon."

Mr. and Mrs. Curtain believe their son, who has been overseas since April 15, has been serving with the Fifth Army of General Mark Clark. It is possible he was injured in the Salerno fighting.

Young Curtain has been with Kenneth Wertman of Washington township, who also informed his mother last week that he had been wounded.

FARM TOOLS TO BE AVAILABLE, KRUSE DECLARES

Pickaway county farm organization leaders were told Saturday by Elmer F. Kruse, Ohio Farm War Board chief and chairman of the Ohio AAA, that Ohio farmers can look toward 1944 with a brighter outlook for obtaining sufficient machinery to carry on their work.

Mr. Kruse told John C. Boggs, Pickaway county AAA chief and War Board leader, that machinery manufacturers have been allotted an increased amount of steel through an order which permits them to manufacture 80 percent of the amount of machines they made in 1940.

Manufacturers were allowed to make only about 40 percent in 1943 of their machinery volume, and the quotas were set so late that some were unable to get in to full production in time for 1943 sales.

"Factories now are running on the allotments for 1944," Mr. Boggs declared.

The abandonment of the "concentration" plan which confined the making of certain types of machinery to a few plants has also helped increase farm machinery production.

In Germany in the 16th century, letter carriers were equipped with stilts which were supposed to increase their speed.

ing Nazi forces of Field Marshal Albert Kesselring.

Meanwhile, Eisenhower's headquarters announced that the British Eighth Army, under Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, had continued its advance north of the captured communications center of Foggia. The Britons have seized San Severo and Lucera. San Severo is approximately 20 miles northeast of the Foggia airfields, and Lucera is about 12 miles north of that vital rail junction.

Crusade Under Way

It was evident that Eisenhower's forces were already carrying out the crusade promised by President Roosevelt yesterday in Washington when he said the Allies would turn their attentions toward liberating Rome and the Pope from the Nazis.

Where the combined American-British forces in Italy would come into contact with Kesselring's hordes for a full-scale battle was problematic. However, expectations were that the Nazi field Marshal may elect to stand on the Volturno river, 20 miles north of Naples.

In getting his forces there, the German general faced bottlenecks provided by traffic congestion and roads cratered by smashing attacks dealt out to the fleeing Nazis by Allied aircraft.

INDESTRUCTIBLE MIKE FINALLY SLAIN BY AXIS

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 2.—"Indestructible Mike" is dead!

The man who was shot by a firing squad and lived to tell about it is no more. Of this his wife was convinced today, following receipt of a telegram from the War Department. Details of his death were not disclosed.

Private Mike Scambelluri, a paratrooper, gained undying fame not by executing any brilliant maneuver, but by being captured.

It was during the invasion of Sicily that he was taken prisoner by the Italians after he was dropped from a troop-carrying plane behind the enemy lines. He was brought before an Italian captain immediately and questioned.

But Mike wouldn't talk!

Infuriated after every persuasive method had failed, the Italian officer ordered Scambelluri to face a firing squad.

There was no ceremony as the American soldier was brought into a courtyard and placed against a wall. A crisp order and rifles aimed from a distance of less than 25 feet cracked.

Seven bullets lodged in Mike's body as he crumpled to the pavement, and he was left for dead. But his heart was more powerful than his injuries. When he was alone, he pulled himself to his feet and, miraculous as it may seem, stumbled miles to American lines.

But today, Mrs. Marjorie Scambelluri, the girl he married just before he was inducted into the army on March 9, 1942, held a telegram informing her tersely that Mike, the indestructible, is dead.

HERE'S LINEUP OF TODAY'S BIG GRID CONTESTS

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 2 — Heralded as one of the greatest football teams in Big Ten history, Michigan's highly rated gridiron eleven was unveiled for Chicago district fans today when it met Northwestern at Dwyer stadium. Whether the Wolverines were as good as they are touted, the opportunity to see this all-star combination of talent drew around 48,000 customers.

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — With a distinct edge in age and experience the Great Lakes Bluejackets were heavy favorites today to trounce Clark Shaughnessy's young University of Pittsburgh football team before team before 22,000 sailors at the U. S. naval training station.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., — Scrappy little band of Illinois gridders invaded Lafayette today for a Big Ten conference football game with the Boilermakers of Purdue and the game had "pushover" labels all over it. Even Coach Ray Eliot of the Illini said of Purdue, "they're unbeatable" after watching Elmer Burnham's powerhouse give Martin the business last Saturday.

MEMORIAL STADIUM, Berkeley, Cal., — New Year's Day and the Rose Bowl are a long way off, but the west coast's representative in that annual grid classic probably will be decided today when the Southern California Trojans and California Bears clash at Berkeley stadium.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., — A Notre Dame team rated as one of the nation's outstanding gridiron elevens opened its home season today by meeting a Georgia Tech team which is considered almost as strong. Upwards of 30,000 spectators were on hand to see the fighting Irish pit their more experienced first team against the squad which last year beat them 13 to 6.

YOUNG BOUND TO GRAND JURY FOR AUTO THEFT

Harold Luther Young, 22, of Madison Mills, an ex-soldier and a former Mansfield reformatory convict, was bound to the grand jury Friday by Squire B. T. Hedges under $1,000 bond for theft of the automobile of H. B. Swearingen, South Court street. The charge was filed against Young, alias Stevens, by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

Young was arrested after he had taken the Swearingen car from its parking place at Court and Main streets early in the week. Investigation which followed disclosed that the youth had taken four other cars in Washington C. H., New Holland and Circleville. The sheriff said he has confessed all five thefts.

Young pleaded guilty of theft of the Swearingen car in his hearing before the Justice of Peace.

MARTIN SEES U. S. THREATENED BY SOCIALISM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin held today that only an aroused public can prevent "a small but powerful group" in the government from succeeding in substituting state socialism for free enterprise in America.

Speaking before the District of Columbia Medical Scientific Assembly, Martin declared that congress must not permit "bureaucrats, lustful for power and possessing no direct responsibility to the people to overstep their constitutional authority, and through administrative regulations and directives write the laws of the land."

Martin said that the group plotting to destroy free enterprise "is represented in every department of our government."

"Are we going to let them succeed?" he asked. "The answer is an emphatic 'no.' They cannot succeed if the American people are aroused to their schemes. We are willing to fight to save the American way of life.

"To fail to preserve our American way of life will mean we shall have lost the war, regardless of how complete may be our victories over our enemies abroad."

Martin said it was estimated the government owns 75 percent of the 1,500 plants built for war production in the last three years. Loans, moreover, he said, extend government ownership "through almost every phase of our industrial life."

He said that if government policy therefore is one of hostility to free enterprise the government "could, through the application of pressure, establishment of prices, and regulation, bankrupt any business in the country."

ing Nazi forces of Field Marshal Albert Kesselring.

Meanwhile, Eisenhower's headquarters announced that the British Eighth Army, under Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery, had continued his advance north of the captured communications center of Foggia. The Britons have seized San Severo and Lucera. San Severo is approximately 20 miles northeast of the Foggia airfield, and Lucera is about 12 miles north of that vital rail junction.

Crusade Under Way

It was evident that Eisenhower's forces were already carrying out the crusade promised by President Roosevelt yesterday in Washington when he said the Allies would turn their attentions toward liberating Rome and the Pope from the Nazis.

Where the combined American-British forces in Italy would come into contact with Kesselring's hordes for a full-scale battle was problematic. However, expectations were that the Nazi field Marshal may elect to stand on the Volturno river, 20 miles north of Naples.

In getting his forces there, the German general faced bottlenecks provided by traffic congestion and roads cratered by smashing attacks dealt out to the fleeing Nazis by Allied aircraft.

Hamper Retreat

Night bombers blasted pontoon bridges at Grazzanise and the coastal road at Formia, far up the gulf of Gaeta, to hamper retreat of the Nazis. Hard on the heels of Kesselring's forces was the American Fifth Army which "continued" its advance, according to Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters. The Yanks and their British partners also made progress east of Naples.

In Russia, the Soviet army advanced against German positions outside the White Russian towns of Mogilev and Gomel, guarding the approaches to the Polish border. Some 460 localities were overrun by virtually unchecked Russian armies in this section of the front, and more than 4,500 Nazis were slain.

Details of fighting around Kiev and Dnepropetrovsk were lacking for the second successive day, indicating major developments may be expected around these two major German Dnieper river strongholds.

A possible raid on the German-held French coast was indicated with an unsubstantiated Nazi report that their batteries had sunk a British landing barge which, with other vessels, entered Boulogne harbor last night.

In the southwest Pacific, Allied bombers sank three and possibly four of an 11-ship convoy seeking to sneak through the Bougainville straits, meanwhile, the Jap garrison at Finschhafen was entrapped as Australian ground forces entered the New Guinea base's environs.

COUNTY'S HONOR ROLL
UNDER CONSTRUCTION

The Honor Roll to include names of all Circleville and Pickaway county men and women in service is under construction at the courthouse. The project is being carried out by the Junior Chamber of Commerce, with Boyd Stout in charge of construction.

Framework for the Honor Roll has been put in place.

Names of approximately 1,800 men and women in uniform are being printed by Frank Susa, a member of the Jaycee organization.

INDESTRUCTIBLE
MIKE FINALLY SLAIN BY AXIS

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 2.—"Indestructible Mike" is dead!

The man who was shot by a firing squad and lived to tell about it is no more. Of this his wife was convinced today, following receipt of a telegram from the War Department. Details of his death were not disclosed.

Private Mike Scambelluri, a paratrooper, gained undying fame not by executing any brilliant maneuver, but by being captured.

It was during the invasion of Sicily that he was taken prisoner by the Italians after he was dropped from a troop-carrying plane behind the enemy lines. He was brought before an Italian captain immediately and questioned.

But Mike wouldn't talk! Infuriated after every persuasive method had failed, the Italian officer ordered Scambelluri to face a firing squad.

There was no ceremony as the American soldier was brought into a courtyard and placed against a wall. A crisp order and rifles aimed from a distance of less than 25 feet crackled.

Seven bullets lodged in Mike's body as he crumpled to the pavement, and he was left for dead. But his heart was more powerful than his injuries. When he was alone, he pulled himself to his feet and, miraculous as it may seem, stumbled miles to American lines.

But today, Mrs. Marjorie Scambelluri, the girl he married just before he was inducted into the army on March 9, 1942, held a telegram informing her tersely that Mike, the indestructible, is dead.

The city of Boston was so named by the order of the council on September 17, 1630.

The First Presbyterian church in New York was incorporated September 19, 1720.

HERE'S LINEUP
OF TODAY'S BIG
GRID CONTESTS

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 2 — Heralded as one of the greatest football teams in Big Ten history, Michigan's highly rated gridiron eleven was unveiled for Chicago district fans today when it met Northwestern at Dyche stadium. Whether the Wolverines were as good as they are touted, the opportunity to see this all-star combination of talent drew around 48,000 customers.

GREAT LAKES, Ill. — With a distinct edge in age and experience the Great Lakes Bluejackets were heavy favorites today to trounce Clark Shaughnessy's young University of Pittsburgh football team before team, before 22,000 sailors at the U. S. naval training station.

LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Scrappy little band of Illinois gridirers invaded Lafayette today for a Big Ten conference football game with the Boilermakers of Purdue and the game had "pushover" labels all over it. Even Coach Ray Elliot of the Illini said of Purdue, "they're unbeatable" after watching Elmer Burnham's powerhouse give Marquette the business last Saturday.

MEMORIAL STADIUM, Berkeley, Cal. — New Year's Day and the Rose Bowl are a long way off, but the west coast's representative in that annual grid classic probably will be decided today when the Southern California Trojans and California Bears clash at Berkeley stadium.

NOTRE DAME, Ind. — A Notre Dame team rated as one of the nation's outstanding gridiron elevens opened its home season today by meeting a Georgia Tech team which is considered almost as strong. Upwards of 30,000 spectators were on hand to see the fighting Irish pit their more experienced first team against the squad which last year beat them 13 to 6.

YOUNG BOUND TO GRAND JURY FOR AUTO THEFT

Harold Luther Young, 22, of Madison Mills, an ex-soldier and a former Mansfield reformatory convict, was bound to the grand jury Friday by Squire B. T. Hedges under $1,000 bond for theft of the automobile of H. B. Swearingen, South Court street. The charge was filed against Young, alias Stevens, by Sheriff Charles Radcliff.

Young was arrested after he had taken the Swearingen car from its parking place at Court and Main streets early in the week. Investigation which followed disclosed that the youth had taken four other cars in Washington C. H., New Holland and Circleville. The sheriff said he has confessed all five thefts.

Young pleaded guilty of theft of the Swearingen car in his hearing before the Justice of Peace.

Anyway, a 16-year-old kid gets a kick out of being rated as a man needed for his country's defense.

a lone hand, and American and British diplomacy fails to swerve him from that path, it is feared there will be another great war within the coming generation.

The diplomatic informant also said the United States delegation, headed by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, is going to the tripower conference in almost complete ignorance of what Stalin has in mind for the future.

Apart from the fact that the Soviets are known to want the Baltic states, eastern Poland and Bessarabia, Moscow has given no hint of what role Russia intends to play in European affairs after this war.

MARTIN SEES
U. S. THREATENED
BY SOCIALISM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2.—House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin held today that only an aroused public can prevent "a small but powerful group" in the government from succeeding in substituting state socialism for free enterprise in America.

Speaking before the District of Columbia Medical Scientific Assembly, Martin declared that congress must not permit "bureaucrats, lustful for power and possessing no direct responsibility to the people to overstep their constitutional authority, and through administrative regulations and directives write the laws of the land."

Martin said that the group plotting to destroy free enterprise "is represented in every department of our government."

"Are we going to let them succeed?" he asked. "The answer is an emphatic 'no.' They cannot succeed if the American people are aroused to their schemes. We are willing to fight to save the American way of life."

"To fail to preserve our American way of life will mean we shall have lost the war, regardless of how complete may be our victories over our enemies abroad."

Martin said that was estimated the government owns 75 percent of the 1,500 plants built for war production in the last three years. Loans, moreover, he said, extend government ownership "through almost every phase of our industrial life."

He said that if government policy therefore is one of hostility to free enterprise the government "could, through the application of pressure, establishment of prices, and regulation, bankrupt any business in the country."

JAP RETRIBUTION

THE Japs, gorged with territory and resources they have seized, are expected now to retreat from the less valuable parts of the Pacific, and dig in to hold what they want. That includes, presumably, the Philippines, the Dutch and British possessions between Asia and Australia, the Malay Peninsula, French Indo-China and Burma, and a few other oriental odds and ends. Many small islands of the southwest Pacific which they have seized are probably regarded as of slight importance, except as buffers. As matters stand, they have a vast, rich empire, which would make them very powerful hereafter — if they could hold and develop it.

But like many an American farmer, they now have far more land than they can handle. And probably the immense job of development and exploitation they have assumed is handicapping them now for more effective prosecution of the war. It is as if our own nation had tried to fight a great war and develop the West at the same time.

Meanwhile General MacArthur has been impatiently "collecting islands," and Uncle Sam has been quietly cooking up retaliation for the savage and ambitious Japs. It can't be long now till retribution strikes that outfit.

MIGRANT WORKERS

IT is natural in these times that people should throng to industrial cities for profitable employment. Such a trend is necessary, in order to satisfy the enormous demands of industry. But in many places the movement is too great, and hundreds or thousands of the "in-migrants" are disappointed.

The United States Employment Service is trying to make the situation clear and save migratory citizens from grief. It reports that in one of the larger cities, where 4,121 incoming people applied in the first three weeks of September, more than one-third of the applicants were rejected. This is done officially now, through a system by which applicants must have a "statement of availability" and also a "certificate of inter-area clearance" from their USES office, stating that they are not needed for war work in their home communities.

Some localities are in great need of men. But in general, it is better for people wanting work, or employed people seeking more essential jobs, not to go around shopping aimlessly for them, but to accept what is most readily available in their own areas. Their pay may be less, but they may live more comfortably and save more money.

SLEEPING SCRAP

THIS Autumn's scrap drive will be directed largely to what is called "dormant scrap." The word means "sleeping." Obsolete machinery, tools, dies, jigs and other things not needed in the war effort are thus classed as being asleep at the switch. They ought to be working to win the war. Every effort will be made to dig them out of factories, many of which turned from peace to war so fast that they never did do a regular "housecleaning" but merely threw the unused machinery into rough storage, without taking time to see whether it could all be used again later or not.

Farms, too, and households are apt to have some of this sleeping stuff around. The scrap definitely laid away and forgotten was worked out of households pretty thoroughly a year or two ago. But some has accumulated since then, and another look-see will be likely to turn up some stuff which people felt they could not part with the first time. That old egg-cooker some one gave them for a wedding present, the waffle iron no longer used because there is a new electric one, but still treasured because "it might be useful some time"—that kind of thing is still around. And there are always rusty nuts, rods and bolts.

The scrap of the last drives has been used up. More is now needed. Wake up that sleeping scrap and get it to working.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON

STEINHARDT A DIPLOMATIC MESS

WASHINGTON—Cordell Hull has picked some of the lemons in U. S. diplomacy, but one you can't blame on him is the mercurial, unpredictable U. S. ambassador to Turkey, Laurence A. Steinhardt.

Steinhart is purely and personally the President's choice, as the ambassador himself makes quite clear when he meets non-diplomats. "I'm just an American businessman," he says with modest self-deprecation. But when he is among State department people, the tune is likely to be, "Of course, I'm practically a career man, having been in the service for ten years."

Thanks to a $5,000 campaign contribution and his uncle, Steinhart's diplomatic star got hitched to the Roosevelt band wagon during the elections of 1932, and has stayed hitched ever since. His uncle, Sam Untermyer, had known Roosevelt ever since he grew up in New York politics, and nephew Larry Steinhart was promptly made U. S. minister to Sweden.

A lot of people welcomed the appointment at the time. A lot of people remarked that new blood was being pumped into the diplomatic service. Steinhart was a young New York lawyer with a fresh outlook and was expected to go places. On the surface he has. He has been promoted from minister to Sweden to ambassador to Peru, then ambassador to Russia, then ambassador to Turkey—his career being punctuated with fat contributions to the Democratic campaign chest.

IN OTHER PEOPLE'S HAIR

But beneath this ambassadorial facade, Steinhart has fallen into all the petty ways of professional diplomats. He has tried hard. He has worked long hours. He has secured reams of publicity. He has even boasted that he has been able to do what other diplomats cannot do—live on his $17,500 salary. But when it comes to running a streamlined embassy or contributing to the peace and well-being of the world, Steinhart has chiefly succeeded in getting in other people's hair.

Typical of his operations was a 2,000-word coded cable sent from Moscow October 5, 1940, received by the State department at 2:50 a. m., telling why he was not going to admit Polish and Baltic refugees of his own religious faith into the United States. He could have condensed the cable to 100 words.

Or, again, when he ordered typhus serum from the United States and suspected it was being held up in Cairo, Steinhart frantically wired U. S. Ambassador Alexander Kirk in Egypt to expedite the shipment. When the unperturbed Kirk did not reply immediately, Steinhart informed him that he would call a press conference and tell the newspapers why the U. S. embassy staff in Turkey "was threatened with death in the typhus plague."

Ambassador Kirk refused to be stampeded.

Through some whim of fate, Steinhart usually lands in a key country at a time when its policy virtually affects the world. He was ambassador to Russia during that difficult period from 1939 to 1941 between the Stalin-Hitler alliance and the time Russia was invaded. This was a tough assignment. Nobody could have done much to improve Russian-American relations at that time, and eventually the manner in which the Russians trailed the U. S. ambassador around Moscow got very much on his nerves, and he on theirs. In the end they hinted that a new ambassador might be welcome.

SWAYING NEUTRAL TURKEY

So Steinhart went to Turkey. There had been a great opportunity. Neutral Turkey was the key to victory in the Balkans. At one time she could have swung the war either way. Although reasonably popular with the Turkish government, Steinhart has not done much swaying.

He has kept himself in the headlines. When an especially choice lend-lease shipment such as atabrin arrived, he has had himself photographed personally presenting it to the minister of foreign affairs. Or he has helped see to it that the wives of Turkish deputies got lease-lend hair nets and nylon stockings. He even went so far as to offer to the Turkish government some radio equipment which was militarily restricted by the U. S. Signal Corps and which in the end could not be presented after all. His excuse, when asked about it afterward, was: "Well, it brought some good publicity."

Meanwhile he protested to the State department when the Office of War Information distributed to the Turkish press pictures of Nazi saboteurs being court-

Cerebellum Acts as Body Equilibrator

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IF YOU did not have a cerebellum, or if your cerebellum gets out of whack, you are almost as badly off as if you didn't have any brain at all. The cerebellum lies at the base of the brain, is composed of the same kind of nervous tissue, but it has functions of its own. It is the great co-ordinator and equilibrator of the body.

It receives fibers from the centers for the eye, the ear, the organ of equilibrium, from the nerves coming from the skin up the spinal cord, and from the motor area of the brain. All these are fused to make the equilibrium of the body perfect. Then the cerebellum sends out fibers to the muscles which makes them synergistic—move in unison and purposefully.

Acute alcoholic intoxication is a good enough example of disturbance of equilibrium to illustrate at least that perfect equilibrium is a co-ordinated function. The drunk's vision is disturbed—he sees double or triple; his organs of equilibrium, the semi-circular canals, are not functioning—give him an amateur Barany test by spinning him around and when you let go of him he is lost in an impenetrable forest; his muscles have lost co-ordination and he fumbles at his buttons, he cannot grasp even a glass without bracing his body and arms, pulls a coin out of his pocket and drops it on the floor. Yet his motor reflexes and skin responses are likely to be quite normal, he has no paralysis of the muscles, and if you can get him to respond at all, he can determine the position of his fingers, toes, feet, hands, legs, etc.

Turning from the pathological condition of the drunk, let us consider the marvels even the humblest of us perform daily and hourly in the field of equilibrium. I am playing golf and I am, at the moment I am describing, about to hit a golf ball with the end of a club.

The golf ball in the first place is quite a small object—a sphere only a little over an inch in diameter. The face of the club is also quite small. My feet are about two or three feet from the ball. I am in no physical contact with it whatever. The face of the club is far from my body, controlled only by my hands. Yet I must bring not only the face but the center of the face of the club not only into contact with the ball, but within a spot geometrically opposite the exact center of the ball. I do not claim I always do this, but I do it perhaps two times out of three, and that I do it at all seems to me sort of automatically marvelous.

It is a triumph of my cerebellum. I am able to hold my body in a certain poise—my stance includes maintaining a tonus of my muscles, a correct sense of what my joints are doing, and of course my semi-circular canals are working like fury all through my swing. My vision is also involved: I have to keep my eye on the ball, or at least so I am told on the highest authority. And all these sensations and volitions are co-ordinated in the cerebellum.

A. J.: How long is the contagious stage of whooping cough? Is it true that children whoop long after the contagious stage is over?

Answer: The first three weeks are the most infective period of whooping cough, although strictly speaking the entire infective period lasts six weeks.

W. L. R.: What causes Buerger's disease? Is there a cure or any relief?

Answer: Buerger's disease is an inflammation and gradual closure of the arteries of the legs. Treatment means giving up tobacco, and the use of exercises which improve the circulation. Surgery is sometimes necessary. You certainly should have personal medical advice.

ASK ADAM

RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION WATKINS E. WRIGHT

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX
ADAM DID discuss the matter of the old Johnson farm with Brenda that night—but he didn't get around to it until the rehearsal was over. He tried several times, and failed. Mrs. Platt was too eager for them all to get ahead and really get something started.

"There's far too much dilly-dallying," she said. "We'll never get the play on if we don't dig in and work."

"Most of us have so much on our minds, Mrs. Platt," Jack said.

"That's right," Adam agreed. He turned to Brenda, beside whom he was sitting, and added, "I've certainly got plenty on my mind, and part of it concerns you."

"Me?" said Brenda, surprised. "You sound downright intriguing."

"These," said Adam, "are intriguing times."

"Go on, tell me more," Brenda urged.

"Can't—not just now. We must be alone."

"Now you sound downright romantic!"

"Don't get me wrong, Brenda, I—"

"Oh, then you mean it's not romance you want to discuss?"

"No, it isn't. It's something far more important."

"Really? Some people think nothing's more important than romance."

Adam looked at her. "Do you?"

"That depends," said Brenda evasively. "Adam North, you've got my curiosity aroused to the bursting point."

"Sorry. We can't talk here."

Brenda smiled and searched Adam's face. "You make me feel like an adventurer in an exciting movie," she said. "You know, the sort where a secret agent of a foreign power decides to make the woman help him—or maybe save him from the enemy."

"You read too much fiction," Adam accused.

Then, before he could say more, Mrs. Platt called to him.

"Adam North, stop talking to Brenda Leigh and go over there by Susan Potter," she said.

"Yes'm," said Adam, "eeling rather like a schoolboy. He sat down beside Susan. "Now what?"

"I want you two to go over that scene in the first act," said Mrs.

Platt. "The one where you call on business, and begin to see that Lisa is attractive—something besides a girl whose family makes a meal ticket of her."

"Yes'm."

"Do you know your lines yet?"

"No'm."

"Shame on you!"

"Gosh, Mrs. Platt, it's hard to find time to study. Maybe you'd better give someone else the part of John."

"Nonsense! You're always good in leads, and folks sort of count on your playing them."

"Maybe they do, but—"

"This is no time for 'buts' and for trying to get out of helping me," Mrs. Platt looked at Susan. "Do you know your lines?"

"Part of them," said Susan.

"You should know all of them," Mrs. Platt said. "Certainly you have plenty of time—with nothing to do but look after a cottage."

"But she does have something else to do," said Adam, coming to Susan's defense. "She's working in the factory."

"You mean she's making tools?"

"Oh, no," said Susan. "I'm in the cafeteria."

"Waitress?"

"No, a sort of—"

"She's my dietitian," said Adam. "Now let's go on with the play."

Mrs. Platt sighed heavily. "It seems to me that all of you are doing your best to hold me back," she said. "Deliberately going out to get jobs." She picked up the play manuscript. "Very well, begin."

Adam did so, and so did Susan. In fact, they read or spoke their lines so well the others found it difficult to concentrate on the business of listening for their cues.

"They're darned good," Jack whispered to Ruth, who sat beside him. "Aren't they?"

"Yes," said Ruth, loathing Mrs. Platt for not having cast her in the role Susan was rehearsing. "I only hope Mr. Potter understands."

"Understands what?"

"That it's only acting."

Jack grinned. "They DO put a lot of feeling into it, don't they? Especially Adam. If they keep on improving, they'll be knockouts on opening night—unless Bill Potter does a little knocking out himself."

Ruth looked startled. "You don't think he'd do a thing like that, do you?" she said.

"He might," said Jack. "After all, Susan is his wife, and seeing Adam making love to her might make him see red also."

"That would be awful!" Ruth said in a tense whisper. "Breaking up the play—making a scene—"

"Oh, I don't know about that. It might end all the business of asking Adam—that old Linville game that's bothered you so much."

"Shh!" hissed Mrs. Platt.

The rehearsal went on and on—far into the night.

It was nearly midnight when Mrs. Platt finally decided to call it quits for the time being.

"We'll skip a couple of nights," she announced, "in order to give all of you time to memorize your lines. And then we start rehearsing in the high school auditorium."

"Good!" someone exclaimed. "We can get into the spirit of the thing so much more readily when we're on a real stage."

As they all got their hats and wraps Ruth lingered close to Adam, hoping he would take her home. She not only wanted to be with him just because being with him made her happy, but she wanted to talk to him about things at the factory. He had been terribly evasive—and so had Jack. He bothered her. And she didn't like having Adam keep things from her, things that had to do with the factory and all that was being done there.

But Adam didn't seem to see her. He was evidently trying to get a word with Brenda Leigh; anyway, he kept edging toward Brenda, as Ruth edged toward him.

Jack came up. He took in the situation at a glance.

"Come on, Ruth," he said, a little annoyed. "Adam's not going to take you home, so you might as well reconcile yourself to my company."

"Sometimes," Ruth said angrily, "you make me positively ill."

"Sorry," said Jack. "But it's mutual. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, chasing after a man."

"I wasn't chasing."

"Then hanging around him," said Jack. "That's just as bad."

They went out together, on the verge of a quarrel.

JAP RETRIBUTION
THE Japs, gorged with territory and resources they have seized, are expected now to retreat from the less valuable parts of the Pacific, and dig in to hold what they want. That includes, presumably, the Philippines, the Dutch and British possessions between Asia and Australia, the Malay Peninsula, French Indo-China and Burma, and a few other oriental odds and ends. Many small islands of the southwest Pacific which they have seized are probably regarded as of slight importance, except as buffers. As matters stand, they have a vast, rich empire, which would make them very powerful—hereafter — if they could hold and develop it.
But like many an American farmer, they now have far more land than they can handle. And probably the immense job of development and exploitation they have assumed is handicapping them now for more effective prosecution of the war. It is as if our own nation had tried to fight a great war and develop the West at the same time.
Meanwhile General MacArthur has been impatiently "collecting islands," and Uncle Sam has been quietly cooking up retaliation for the savage and ambitious Japs. It can't be long now till retribution strikes that outfit.

MIGRANT WORKERS
IT is natural in these times that people should throng to industrial cities for profitable employment. Such a trend is necessary, in order to satisfy the enormous demands of industry. But in many places the movement is too great, and hundreds or thousands of the "in-migrants" are disappointed.
The United States Employment Service is trying to make the situation clear and save migratory citizens from grief. It reports that in one of the larger cities, where 4,121 incoming people applied in the first three weeks of September, more than one-third of the applicants were rejected. This is done officially now, through a system by which applicants must have a "statement of availability" and also a "certificate of inter-area clearance" from their USES office, stating that they are not needed for war work in their home communities.
Some localities are in great need of men. But in general, it is better for people wanting work, or employed people seeking more essential jobs, not to go around shopping aimlessly for them, but to accept what is most readily available in their own areas. Their pay may be less, but they may live more comfortably and save more money.

SLEEPING SCRAP
THIS Autumn's scrap drive will be directed largely to what is called "dormant scrap." The word means "sleeping." Obsolete machinery, tools, dies, jigs and other things not needed in the war effort are thus classed as being asleep at the switch. They ought to be working to win the war. Every effort will be made to dig them out of factories, many of which turned from peace to war so fast that they never did do a regular "housecleaning" but merely threw the unused machinery into rough storage, without taking time to see whether it could all be used again later or not.
Farms, too, and households are apt to have some of this sleeping stuff around. The scrap definitely laid away and forgotten was worked out of households pretty thoroughly a year or two ago. But some has accumulated since then, and another look-see will be likely to turn up some stuff which people felt they could not part with the first time. That old egg-cooker some one gave them for a wedding present, the waffle iron no longer used because there is a new electric one, but still treasured because "it might be useful some time"—that kind of thing is still around. And there are always rusty nuts, rods and bolts.
The scrap of the last drives has been used up. More is now needed. Wake up that sleeping scrap and get it to working.

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND
By DREW PEARSON.

STEINHARDT A DIPLOMATIC MESS
WASHINGTON—Cordell Hull has picked some of the lemons in U. S. diplomacy, but one you can't blame on him is the mercurial, unpredictable U. S. ambassador to Turkey, Laurence A. Steinhardt.
Steinhardt is purely and personally the President's choice, as the ambassador himself makes quite clear when he meets non-diplomats. "I'm just an American businessman," he says with modest self-deprecation. But when he is among State department people, the tune is likely to be, "Of course, I'm practically a career man, having been in the service for ten years."
Thanks to a $5,000 campaign contribution and his uncle, Steinhardt's diplomatic star got hitched to the Roosevelt band wagon during the elections of 1932, and has stayed hitched ever since. His uncle, Sam Untermyer, had known Roosevelt ever since he grew up in New York politics, and nephew Larry Steinhardt was promptly made U. S. minister to Sweden.
A lot of people welcomed the appointment at the time. A lot of people remarked that new blood was being pumped into the diplomatic service. Steinhardt was a young New York lawyer with a fresh outlook and was expected to go places. On the surface he has. He has been promoted from minister to Sweden to ambassador to Peru, then ambassador to Russia, then ambassador to Turkey—his career being punctuated with fat contributions to the Democratic campaign chest.

IN OTHER PEOPLE'S HAIR
But beneath this ambassadorial facade, Steinhardt has fallen into all the petty ways of professional diplomats. He has tried hard. He has worked long hours. He has secured reams of publicity. He has even boasted that he has been able to do what other diplomats cannot do—live on his $17,500 salary. But when it comes to running a streamlined embassy or contributing to the peace and well-being of the world, Steinhardt has chiefly succeeded in getting in other people's hair.

Typical of his operations was a 2,000-word coded cable sent from Moscow October 5, 1940, received by the State department at 2:50 a. m., telling why he was not going to admit Polish and Baltic refugees of his own religious faith into the United States. He could have condensed the cable to 100 words.
Or, again, when he ordered typhus serum from the United States and suspected it was being held up in Cairo, Steinhardt frantically wired U. S. Ambassador Alexander Kirk in Egypt to expedite the shipment. When the unperturbed Kirk did not reply immediately, Steinhardt informed him that he would call a press conference and tell the newspapers why the U. S. embassy staff in Turkey "was threatened with death in the typhus plague."

Ambassador Kirk refused to be stamped.
Through some whim of fate, Steinhardt usually lands in a key country at a time when its policy virtually affects the world. He was ambassador to Russia during that difficult period from 1939 to 1941 between the Stalin-Hitler alliance and the time Russia was invaded. This was a tough assignment. Nobody could have done much to improve Russian-American relations at that time, and eventually the manner in which the Russians trailed the U. S. ambassador around Moscow got very much on his nerves, and he on theirs. In the end they hinted that a new ambassador might be welcome.

SWAYING NEUTRAL TURKEY
So Steinhardt went to Turkey. There had been a great opportunity. Neutral Turkey was the key to victory in the Balkans. At one time she could have swung the war either way. Although reasonably popular with the Turkish government, Steinhardt has not done much swaying.
He has kept himself in the headlines. When an especially choice lend-lease shipment such as atabrin arrived, he has had himself photographed personally presenting it to the minister of foreign affairs. Or he has helped see to it that the wives of Turkish deputies got lease-lend hair nets and nylon stockings. He even went so far as to offer to the Turkish government some radio equipment which was militarily restricted by the U. S. Signal Corps and which in the end could not be presented after all. His excuse, when asked about it afterward, was: "Well, it brought some good publicity."
Meanwhile he protested to the State department when the Office of War Information distributed to the Turkish press pictures of Nazi saboteurs being court-

"He HAD to carry her across the threshold. She chased him so long she was all worn out!"

Cerebellum Acts as Body Equilibrator

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
IF YOU did not have a cerebellum, or if your cerebellum gets out of whack, you are almost as badly off as if you didn't have any brain at all. The cerebellum lies at the base of the brain, is composed of the same kind of nervous tissue, but it has functions of its own. It is the great co-ordinator and equilibrator of the body.
It receives fibers from the centers for the eye, the ear, the organ of equilibrium, from the nerves coming from the skin up the spinal cord, and from the motor area of the brain. All these are fused to make the equilibrium of the body perfect. Then the cerebellum sends out fibers to the muscles which makes them synergistic—move in unison and purposefully.
Acute alcoholic intoxication is a good enough example of disturbance of equilibrium to illustrate at least that perfect equilibrium is a co-ordinated function. The drunk's vision is disturbed—he sees double or triple; his organs of equilibrium, the semi-circular canals, are not functioning—give him an amateur Barany test by spinning him around and when you let go of him he is lost in an impenetrable forest; his muscles have lost co-ordination and he fumbles at his buttons, he cannot grasp even a glass without bracing his body and arms, pulls a coin out of his pocket and drops it on the floor. Yet his motor reflexes and skin responses are likely to be quite normal, he has no paralysis of the muscles, and if you can get him to respond at all, he can determine the position of his fingers, toes, feet, hands, legs, etc.

"Now let's go on with the play," Mrs. Platt sighed heavily. "It seems to me that all of you are doing your best to hold me back," she said. "Deliberately going out to get jobs." She picked up the play manuscript. "Very well, begin."
Adam did so, and so did Susan. In fact, they read or spoke their lines so well the others found it difficult to concentrate on the business of listening for their cues.
"They're darned good," Jack whispered to Ruth, who sat beside him. "Aren't they?"
"Yes," said Ruth, loathing Mrs. Platt for not having cast her in the role Susan was rehearsing. "I only hope Mr. Potter understands."
"Understands what?"
"That it's only acting." Jack grinned. "They DO put a lot of feeling into it, don't they? Especially Adam. If they keep on improving, they'll be knockouts on opening night—unless Bill Potter does a little knocking out himself." Ruth looked startled. "You can't think he'd do a thing like that, do you?" she said.
"He might," said Jack. "After all, Susan is his wife, and seeing Adam making love to her might make him see red also."
"That would be awful!" Ruth said in a tense whisper. "Breaking up the play—making a scene—"
"Oh, I don't know about that. It might end all the business of asking Adam—that old Linville game that's bothered you so much."
"Shh!" hissed Mrs. Platt. The rehearsal went on and on—far into the night.
It was nearly midnight when Mrs. Platt finally decided to call it quits for the time being.
"We'll skip a couple of nights," she announced, "in order to give all of you time to memorize your lines. And then we start rehearsing in the high school auditorium."
"Good!" someone exclaimed. "We can get into the spirit of the thing so much more readily when we're on a real stage."
As they all got their hats and wraps Ruth lingered close to Adam, hoping he would take her home. She not only wanted to be with him just because being with him made her happy, but she wanted to talk to him about things at the factory. He had been terribly evasive about the trip he and Jack had made—and so had Jack. It bothered her. Adam kept things from her, things that had to do with the factory and all that was being done there.
But Adam didn't seem to see her. He was evidently trying to get a word with Brenda Leigh; anyway, he kept edging toward Brenda, as Ruth edged toward him.
Jack came up. He took in the situation at a glance.
"Come on, Ruth," he said, a little annoyed. "Adam's not going to take you home, so you might as well reconcile yourself to my company."
"Sometimes," Ruth said angrily, "you make me positively ill."
"Sorry," said Jack. "But it's mutual. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, chasing after a man."
"I wasn't chasing."
"Then hanging around him," said Jack. "That's just as bad." They went out together, on the verge of a quarrel.

2. What cat ate a giant?
3. Who was asked to "walk a little faster" in a popular child's story?
Words of Wisdom
Walk boldly and wisely in the light thou hast; there is a hand above will help thee on. Bailey.
Today's Horoscope
Today gives a love of peace and harmony, a sunny disposition and an even temper. You avoid conflict. Quarrels make you feel depressed. Literature and music interest you. You are devoted to your loved ones and they, in turn, esteem you. This afternoon the knowledge of a special skill can be the means of starting a good cycle, if you have the patience to take advantage of every opening. Don't yield to temptation early this evening to boast or to ask for a favor that you do not deserve.
Hints on Etiquette
If a friend is lunching or dining with a male friend and you stop at their table to talk, don't stay and talk and talk, keeping the gentleman standing with his food growing cold. Better still, don't go to the table at all. Just bow and smile to her and go to your own table.
Horoscope for Sunday
If you are celebrating a birthday today, you are ambitious, filled with lofty ideals, determined in your efforts and possess a shrewd, practical mind. You are an excellent conversationalist. You are honest, sincere and diplomatic.
One-Minute Test Answers
1. Characters in the poem of that name by Eugene Field.
2. Puss-in-Boots, when the giant turned himself into a mouse.
3. The snail, in Alice in Wonderland—"Will you walk a little faster," said the whiting to the snail."

You're Telling Me!
THIRTY MILLION pounds of soybeans (from which, it seems, almost anything else can be made) were consumed as food in this country last year. This ought to stop—we can't eat our post-war world and have it, too!
Flat stones are used by certain African tribes as coins. That's one place where hard cash really is.
Having spent the last two Winters on the frozen steppes of Russia, the German Army seems bent on refusing more of the same, thank you!
In a speech addressed to Norwegian Quislings, Hitler expresses concern over the security of post-war Europe. That's something new—the cornered burglar worrying about the safety of his investments!
The moon, says astronomers, is moving away from the earth. Probably to get a better, overall view of what's going on.
Strictly on the basis that this is the era of air power, Zadak Dumkopp picks those St. Louis Red Birds over New York's Yanks.
And then there's the fellow who continues to insist that this can't really be another world war because, so far, he hadn't seen any news pictures of Zeppelins.
JOE GOEBELS is overlooking a good alibi. He might tell the Germans the Nazis are abandoning all those Russian towns because it's too much trouble to try to pronounce them.
Then there's the old maid who thinks it will be a shame to waste a Leap Year in 1944 with so many eligible fellows gone overseas.
Grandpappy Jenkins thinks we should begin to think up a new name for those block busters since so many German industrial towns are rapidly running out of blocks to bust.

Factographs declares it takes 1,000 bees to weigh a pound. Bet they can lick their weight in wildcats.

Now that wood can be utilized for 5,000 different purposes, Grandpappy Jenkins says he feels just like a saboteur whenever he sits down to enjoy a cozy log fire.

Zadak Dumkopp laments that if the war doesn't end soon he's liable to lose his technique as an ice box raider.

For Sunday, October 3
SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise of moderately successful and pleasant activities for the young, in intellectual and cultural circles, with particularly fortuitous conditions for spiritual, mystical, all inspired or idealistic work or aspirations. In this there may be little endorsement from elders.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may expect a lively and profitable year, in intellectual, professional or creative efforts, with success in travel or agreements. Strategic or undercover agreements may make definite progress, with tact, diplomacy or connivance proving lucrative. It may be most desirable to work independently as elders are not harmonious.

A child born on this day should have unusual abilities and ambitions, with dramatic or sensational urges, leading to public success or progress, if erratic impulses or emotionalism be kept in leash. It may be difficult to understand.

For Saturday, October 2
A SUDDEN and quite unforeseen circumstance or event may prove to be thrilling or breathtaking, coming with swift and incisive force of probably a radical nature or causing some hurried or drastic action. Properly handled and met with equanimity and good judgment, rather than impulsive and emotional disturbance, exceptional benefits or sensational publicity might result. Public issues seem involved and of prime importance. There is danger from over acting or indulging in unwise expenditures of funds or other extravagances.

If It Is Your Birthday
Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for the sudden advent of a rather devastating or whirlwind visitation, not disastrous or unwelcome if it be met with poise, calm and sound judgment. While an uprooting and surprising circumstance it should be duly considered from its gainful aspects or possibilities for progress or public recognition. Group matters seem of more significance than private, but these should be managed with conservatism and restraint rather than impetuously or extravagantly. Keep all reactions within proper bounds, considering seriously future issues and stability.

Garden Club Hears Prominent Naturalist

Garden Birds Discussed By E. S. Thomas

More than 50 members and guests of the Pickaway County Garden club gathered Friday at the home of Mrs. Glenn I. Nickerson, South Court street, to hear a talk of outstanding interest by Edward S. Thomas of Columbus, Ohio's most widely known naturalist. Mr. Thomas used for his subject, "Birds in Our Garden", and illustrated his informative talk with Koto-chrome slides through the assistance of Leslie L. Pontius, Circleville nature lover.

Mr. Thomas discussed the plantings in his garden with the idea of attracting birds of many kinds and spoke of the various foods that attract different species. He told of the return of various birds to his garden, these facts being established through banding. In his discussion of hawks, commonly thought of as outland birds because of their long-credited destruction of song birds and chickens, Mr. Thomas revealed that intensive study of several hundred killed in a drive authorized by the state conservation department, showed that their main diet was cutworms, harmful insects and field mice. In three showing traces of having eaten chicken, it was found that the persons sending them in had used chicken for bait.

Establishment of feeding stations in gardens, either on the ground or elevated, would more than pay for themselves in pleasure and interest during the Fall and Winter season, according to Mr. Thomas, who told of many experiences he and his family, as well as their neighbors had enjoyed through them. Showing through color slides the differences in various bird species, Mr. Thomas told of individual characteristics that enabled him to recognize single birds and pairs that made his garden their home. A real treat was the showing of the many beautiful spots near his cabin in Hocking county. His hill retreat is close to that of Mrs. Carrie McCloud which is visited frequently with much interest and pleasure by many residents of Circleville.

Interviewed with Mr. Thomas' discussion of birds and flowers was the thought that the love of outdoors is an inspiration and a consolation in these times of stress.

Mrs. Clarence McAbee, president of the garden club, conducted the opening business session and announced that Mrs. Will Mack, Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. William Cook had been received as new members.

Mrs. Turney Pontius read her report of the last meeting and called the roll, and Mrs. Loring Evans, treasurer, reported.

For the opening number of the interesting program, Miss Caroline Seltz, director of music of Washington township school, played two piano selections, "White Peacock" by Griffes and "The Brownies" by Korngold.

District Churches To Join Sunday In World-Wide Communion Observance

Statement Is Issued By Association Leader, Rev. W. D. Ramsey

Circleville district churches will join almost unanimously in observance of World-Wide Communion Sunday with nearly all ministers calling on members of their congregations to participate in the services.

A statement issued by the Rev. W. D. Ramsey, pastor of Calvary Evangelical church and president of the Pickaway County Ministerial association, follows:

"World-Wide Communion Sunday, October 3, has become a day of great significance in the program of the church and in the history of the world.

"Its purpose is to give to a world which is torn to shreds by hatred, strife, disunity, mistrust and fear a testimony and an example of love, peace, unity and assurance. To show to the world that there is a better way. That Christ is the way to peace, unity, truth and love.

"The church of Christ in every nation, regardless of denomination or of nationality, will on this day fellowship together in this the Sacrament of the Lord Jesus Christ, remembering that he died for all men and that His great salvation is universal.

"Our sons are fighting on the battle fields of the world and we are hearing from these areas as well as from the camps at home where they are in preparation for this warfare that many of their hearts are turning to God and that they are uniting in prayer as never before for the peace of the world. They are in many instances coming to know the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. May we on the home front unite with them in a band of prayer around the world for these eternal values which are the desire of all mankind.

"Give your testimony to your faith in Him by being present in your church for the celebration of the Lord's Supper on Sunday, October 3."

The Rev. G. L. Troutman of Trinity Lutheran church is urging many members of his congregation to choose the evening Communion service in order to avoid overcrowding the morning Communion service. In addition to morning and evening Communion at the Lutheran church, a Communion rite will be held in the afternoon at Lick Run Lutheran church.

The Rev. Clarence Swearingen of the Methodist church announces that his church will join with others in the Communion ritual, the service to recognize the boys of the church who are in the armed forces. More names will be added to the church service flag. After the service the bulletin containing their names will be sent to the boys.

Since chaplains in all branches of service will observe the Communion for the boys it is hoped that their families at home will be in attendance at the Communion services.

Jesus and the Ten Commandments

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 3 is Matt. 5:17-20; 19:16-22; John 5:39, 40, the Golden Text being Matt. 5:17, "Think not that I came to destroy the law or the prophets: I came not to destroy, but to fulfill.")

"THINK NOT that I came to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."

"For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

Thus spake Jesus after He had preached the Sermon on the Mount. He, Jesus, was not come to destroy the law of his people, those laws given to Moses which we have been studying about these many weeks. They were fundamental laws to govern a people in the right way of life, and Jesus had not come to destroy them. He assured his followers. They should still be the laws to govern their conduct through life, but He would go further and give them laws to rule their spirits, fulfilling the earthly laws. Until the end of earthly living, these laws of Moses would hold good.

Rich Youth Comes to Jesus

The story of the rich young ruler who came to Jesus to ask how he could gain eternal life, is a true story. It is not a parable. Although this young man had everything—wealth, station, etc., to make him happy in life, he was not happy or satisfied. He felt there was something more that would make perfect all that he had.

He sought Jesus out from the crowd and said to Him, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

Jesus answered, "Why callest thou Me good? there is none good but one, that is, God; but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments."

What are the commandments I should keep? the man asked. Jesus told him, "Thou shalt not murder. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness. Honor thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The young ruler answered that he had done all these things since he was a child. Then Jesus said to him:

"If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me."

When Jesus had said, "Follow Me" to fishermen, and others, they had straightway left their work and gone with Him. They had left their homes, and lived the community life of sharing each with each whatever they had, and going about teaching and preaching, living on the hospitality of strangers. This man, however, was rich, and had a position; and much as he wanted to be perfect, he could not give these things up, he felt. So, sadly, he left the Master, and went his way. We hear no more of him and wonder if he later regretted that he had not followed the Lord, or if he ever felt satisfied and entirely happy.

The last reference in our lesson is John 5:39, 40. Jesus was evidently tired of trying to make men understand His mission and His message to them as to the way of eternal life. "Search the scriptures," He told them, "for in them ye think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of Me."

"And ye will not come to Me, that ye might have life."

In the scriptures they would find references to His coming, and when they did they might be led to believe Him when He gave them His message which would save them and give them the life eternal for which they yearned.

Garden Club Hears Prominent Naturalist

Garden Birds Discussed By E. S. Thomas

More than 50 members and guests of the Pickaway County Garden club gathered Friday at the home of Mrs. Glenn I. Nickerson, South Court street, to hear a talk of outstanding interest by Edward S. Thomas of Columbus, Ohio's most widely known naturalist. Mr. Thomas used for his subject, "Birds in Our Garden", and illustrated his informative talk with Koto-chrome slides through the assistance of Leslie L. Pontius, Circleville nature lover.

Mr. Thomas discussed the plantings in his garden with the idea of attracting birds of many kinds and spoke of the various foods that attract different species. He told of the return of various birds to his garden, these facts being established through banding. In his discussion of hawks, commonly thought of as outland birds because of their long-credited destruction of song birds and chickens, Mr. Thomas revealed that intensive study of several hundred killed in a drive authorized by the state conservation department, showed that their main diet was cutworms, harmful insects and field mice. In three showing traces of having eaten chicken, it was found that the persons sending them in had used chicken for bait.

Establishment of feeding stations in gardens, either on the ground or elevated, would more than pay for themselves in pleasure and interest during the Fall and Winter season, according to Mr. Thomas, who told of many experiences he and his family, as well as their neighbors had enjoyed through them. Showing through color slides the differences in various bird species, Mr. Thomas told of individual characteristics that enabled him to recognize single birds and pairs that made his garden their home. A real treat was the showing of the many beautiful spots near his cabin in Hocking county. His hill retreat is close to that of Mrs. Carrie McCloud which is visited frequently with much interest and pleasure by many residents of Circleville.

Interwoven with Mr. Thomas' discussion of birds and flowers was the thought that the love of outdoors is an inspiration and a consolation in these times of stress.

Mrs. Clarence McAbee, president of the garden club, conducted the opening business session and announced that Mrs. Will Mack, Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. William Cook had been received as new members.

Mrs. Turney Pontius read her report of the last meeting and called the roll, and Mrs. Loring Evans, treasurer, reported.

For the opening number of the interesting program, Miss Caroline Seitz, director of music of Washington township school, played two piano selections, "White Peacock" by Griffes and "The Brownies" by Korngold.

During the closing social hour, seasonal refreshments were served by Mrs. Nickerson. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. A. J. Lyle, Mrs. Tom Jeffries, Mrs. John Boggs, Mrs. Ralph Curtin, Mrs. Charles Pugsley and Mrs. C. K. Hunsicker.

Gleaners' Class

Gleaners' class of the Pontius United Brethren church of Washington township met Friday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Elliott, East Franklin street, with 20 members and guests present for the interesting meeting.

The class decided to study the catechism of the United Brethren church during the Winter meetings and it was agreed to purchase books of catechism for study.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Stockman, Washington township. Mrs. Frank Dunn and Miss Ethel Brobst will provide the program for the evening.

District Churches To Join Sunday In World-Wide Communion Observance

Statement Is Issued By Association Leader, Rev. W. D. Ramsey

Circleville district churches will join almost unanimously in observance of World-Wide Communion Sunday with nearly all ministers calling on members of their congregations to participate in the services.

A statement issued by the Rev. W. D. Ramsey, pastor of Calvary Evangelical church and president of the Pickaway County Ministerial association, follows:

"World-Wide Communion Sunday, October 3, has become a day of great significance in the program of the church and in the history of the world.

"Its purpose is to give to a world which is torn to shreds by hatred, strife, disunity, mistrust and fear a testimony and an example of love, peace, unity and assurance. To show to the world that there is a better way. That Christ is the way to peace, unity, truth and love.

"The church of Christ in every nation, regardless of denomination or nationality, will on this day fellowship together in this the Sacrament of the Lord Jesus Christ, remembering that he died for all men and that His great salvation is universal.

"Our sons are fighting on the battle fields of the world and we are hearing from these areas as well as from the camps at home where they are in preparation for this warfare that many of their hearts are turning to God and that they are uniting in prayer as never before for the peace of the world. They are in many instances coming to know the Lord Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. May we on the home front unite with them in a band of prayer around the world for these eternal values which are the desire of all mankind.

"Give your testimony to your faith in Him by being present in your church for the celebration of the Lord's Supper on Sunday, October 3."

The Rev. G. L. Troutman of Trinity Lutheran church is urging many members of his congregation to choose the evening Communion service in order to avoid overcrowding the morning Communion service. In addition to morning and evening Communion at the Lutheran church, a Communion rite will be held in the afternoon at Lick Run Lutheran church.

The Rev. Clarence Swearingen of the Methodist church announces that his church will join with others in the Communion ritual, the service to recognize the boys of the church who are in the armed forces. More names will be added to the church service flag. After the service the bulletin containing their names will be sent to the boys.

Since chaplains in all branches of service will observe the Communion for the boys it is hoped that their families at home will be in attendance at the Communion services.

CHURCH OF NAZARENE TO PLAN FORWARD MOVEMENT

"We are determined to make this campaign a success," said Rev. Way "that it may result in the salvation of souls, the entire sanctification of believers and in increasing the membership of our church."

Concentrating especially on those who are not regular in attendance at any church, it is planned to contact relatives, friends, neighbors, fellow workers and others through personal visitations, telephone calls and letters.

Special Sunday programs will be held throughout October, with Sunday School Rally Day October 3, Church Appreciation Day October 10, Family Sunday October 17, Home Coming Sunday October 24, and Church Victory and Church Membership Day October 31. Jesus and the Ten Commandments

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for October 3 is Matt. 5:17-20; 19:16-22; John 5:39, 40; the Golden Text being Matt. 5:17, "Think not that I came to destroy the law or the prophets: I came not to destroy, but to fulfill.")

"THINK NOT that I came to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."

"For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled."

Thus spake Jesus after He had preached the Sermon on the Mount. He, Jesus, was not come to destroy the law of his people, those laws given to Moses which we have been studying about these many weeks. They were fundamental laws to govern a people in the right way of life, and Jesus had not come to destroy them. He assured his followers. They should still be the laws to govern their conduct, but He would go further and give them laws to rule their spirits, fulfilling the earthly laws. Until the end of earthly living, these laws of Moses would hold good.

Rich Youth Comes to Jesus

The story of the rich young ruler who came to Jesus to ask how he could gain eternal life, is a true story. It is not a parable. Although this young man had everything—wealth, station, etc., to make him happy in life, he was not happy or satisfied. He felt there was something more that would make perfect all that he had.

He sought Jesus out from the crowd and said to Him, "Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?"

Jesus answered, "Why callest thou Me good? there is none good but one, that is, God; but if thou

Born in Newark, Stabile has been playing the saxophone since

During the seven weeks that "Awake At the Switch," heard Tuesdays on the Blue network, has been on the air various charities have benefitted to the tune of more than $400. The money accrued when switchmasters on the series failed to give the required number of switches after being told a standard joke. For each failure the switchmasters have to pay $15 toward a national war

Schools To Assist In Waste Paper Salvage Campaign

COLLECTION DAY TO BE SET FOR ALL DISTRICTS

October 10 Set As Tentative Date For Opening Of Drive

McCLAIN MAPS PROGRAM

All Types Of Paper Needed For Remaking Into War Material

A county-wide waste paper salvage campaign, imperative in order to help keep the Container Corporation of America plant and other similar industries meeting war requirements throughout the winter, is being mapped in Pickaway county. The campaign is being headed by Dan McClain, salvage chairman, who will work in cooperation with Norbert Cochran and Vernon Hawkes of the Container Corporation plant.

Mr. McClain said Saturday that much of the effort to obtain many tons of waste paper will be centered in the schools with all principals and superintendents to be asked to attend a meeting soon.

A definite collection day will be set up for each school, the day to be different in each village and township so that trucks to be supplied to haul paper may be available. The schedule will be announced as soon as Mr. McClain has had a chance to meet with school officials.

Nine Month Program

The program will be carried out over a nine month schedule, but it will remain intense during that period, much pressure being applied by paper users and school men to build up the vital supply.

Container Corporation men pointed out that good prices are being paid for paper, and that all proceeds may be used by the schools in whatever manner they wish. The money may be applied to any department or any treasury desired by the school officials.

Mr. McClain said that while paper is the item being sought that trucks will also pick up all other kinds of scrap taken to the schools by the pupils.

Although no definite date has been worked out for opening the campaign, October 10 has been agreed on as the most likely date for the drive to start.

Needed For War

"Millions of paperboard containers are being sent overseas to our fighting forces every week," Mr. Cochran pointed out. "Waste paper is one of the chief raw material sources from which these containers and shipping materials are made. To keep America's supply lines intact to our fighting forces and allies requires an endless stream of containers. These millions of containers sent overseas are not returned for re-use — an important contributing factor to the shortage."

Waste paper is being used in the manufacture of millions of containers weekly. Through scientific development, paper is being converted into bomb bands, practice bombs, wing tips, airplane signals, parachute flares, ammunition chests, shell protectors, shell containers and numerous other military essentials.

YOUTHFUL AUTO DRIVER FINED $10 BY WELDON

Thurman Wheeler, 17, of Ashville, paid a $10 fine Friday to Juvenile Judge Lemuel B. Weldon on a reckless driving charge, the complaint being taken to juvenile court because Wheeler is a minor. The charge followed a police and automobile chase which ended in a wreck on the Walnut creek pike, three young people going to Berger hospital for treatment of injuries.

Young Wheeler told the judge he became frightened when police who were hunting a Lockbourne air base deserter ran into the street calling for him to stop. He said he didn't know what he had done, but was told by others in the car to "step on it" so he did. The car was going 80 miles an hour when it overturned, police said.

Private Everett Costlow, 17, of Ashville, was to be taken to the Fort Hayes hospital for treatment of head injuries. The hospital said he might have a skull fracture; Maxine Ankrom, 16, of Circleville, was treated for cuts and bruises, and Richard Dale Robbins, 16, Ashville, was taken home Friday after being treated for rib injuries.

NEW OPA RULE NOT TO AFFECT LOCAL OFFICE

Although Chester Bowles, general manager of the Office of Price Administration, has banned politics in local rationing boards the order issued this week will probably not affect the Pickaway county War Price and Rationing board's various panels.

George D. McDowell, ration board chief, received information Friday from the national OPA office declaring that boards should prohibit political activities wherever such activities conflict with public interest.

Only two members of local panels who are candidates at the November 2 election are Herman Hill, who is running without opposition for board of education, and E. C. Rector, a candidate for Williamsport council.

Eugene Paul Clark, 18, of Wheelersburg, was taken to Columbus Friday by detectives to face bicycle theft charges. Clark was arrested here by Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious for investigation. (Continued from Page Six) martialled. The Turkish government, he told other U. S. officials, did not like these pictures because they might upset Turkish-German relations.

CENSORING PRESS

On the other hand, Steinhardt went to the Turkish Foreign Office to protest against the Turkish newspaper Tasviri Efkar and demand that it be suppressed—exactly the kind of protest which the State department laughs at when lodged by foreign Ambassadors in Washington against American newspapers.

The Ambassador even proposed that issues of Collier's and Life magazine be censored and pay duty when imported into Turkey, despite the fact that Turkish law does not provide either for censorship or customs duty on magazines.

In fact, most of Steinhardt's life as Ambassador to Turkey seems to be taken up not with the big problems of war and foreign affairs, but with personal fretting. For instance, he wrote a 1,000 word letter because James Gordon of OWI had imported a case of whiskey, even though all duties were properly paid. He became indignant when OWI imported several cases of magazines to counteract Nazi magazines which are flooding Turkey.

He refused to let the U. S. Military and Naval attaches, the Office of Strategic Services and OWI have offices in the giant U. S. Embassy building in Istanbul which stands empty all but a few weeks of the year, since the capital has been moved to Ankara.

Meanwhile, Steinhardt is under violent criticism for failing to do anything about Jews, Armenians and Greeks, who are suffering some of the worst economic persecution in Turkish history. However, Steinhardt points out that he is representing the United States and not other peoples.

Meanwhile, the Russians, who don't like Steinhardt, suspect him of sitting in this key spot for the purpose of fanning traditional Turkish suspicion against Russia. In fact, the Russians suspect the State department of keeping Steinhardt in Turkey for this very purpose. All of the Ambassador's petty goings and comings could be forgiven if it weren't for this one great drawback to his presence in Turkey.

A STATEMENT To the Citizens of Circleville

Your City Council, meeting in special session on Friday evening, September 24th, adopted a resolution directing the City Solicitor to file in court, condemnation proceedings against the Ohio Water Service Company in order to purchase the Circleville property of the Company. With reference to this resolution we submit, for your careful consideration, the following facts.

1. The resolution adopted by City Council stated that Ohio Water Service Company has refused to enter into negotiations with the City for the purpose of determining a fair price for its property. AS A MATTER OF FACT, early in 1942, when Council raised the question of purchase of the Circleville Water Plant, Ohio Water Service Company IMMEDIATELY ASSERTED ITS WILLINGNESS TO NEGOTIATE with the City and to lay its facts and figures on the table. Under date of March 20, 1942, (with a supplement thereto on May 16th, 1942) the Water Company filed with the City Council a fifteen page report and exhibits setting out many pertinent facts and figures concerning income, expenses, costs, values and operating data of the Circleville and other plants, all affecting the question of purchase. In that report the Water Company made the direct statement that "WE ARE WILLING TO NEGOTIATE WITH THE CITY AT ANY TIME on the question of price for this property."

Following this, there were numerous meetings between Council and Water Company representatives. Negotiations have been had to such a point that a selling price has been stated by the Company and an offer has been made by the City. Under such circumstances, it certainly should not be said that the Ohio Water Service Company "has refused to negotiate."

2. This is a time of war. As a result, with business houses closing their doors at least for the duration, with families moving out of Circleville into defense areas, and with the many dislocations resulting therefrom, the residential and commercial income of the Circleville Water Plant has fallen off for three successive years. At the same time its operating costs have increased substantially, as would be expected. In addition to this, prices and values are the highest in history. Under such circumstances, this is certainly not an opportune time, from the taxpayers' and water users' view point, for the city to begin court proceedings to condemn and purchase the water plant. This very fact was recognized by Council itself in November, 1942, as the records of Council will show.

3. During these hazardous and uncertain times with its income decreasing and its operating expenses increasing Ohio Water Service Company has still continued to give the citizens of Circleville steady, reliable service without any increase in rates or charges. This is made possible to some extent by an increase in the income of the Company from its plants in the larger war producing centers.

4. There have been several changes in the membership of Council since the purchase negotiations began early in 1942. Five Councilmen voted in favor of the condemnation resolution. Three of these gentlemen were not members of the council when the reports on this general question were submitted to Council or during the months of study leading up to the reports. The result is that of the seven (7) Councilmen who took part in this very detailed study, only two (2) voted in favor of committing the City to Court action to purchase the property.

We believe that the Citizens of Circleville will bear us up in the contention that the Council, as presently constituted, after due study and consideration, would reach the same conclusion that was reached in Council in November, 1942, namely that this is not an opportune time to commence the proceedings directed in the resolution of Friday, September 24th.

We present the above facts for your careful and considered attention, feeling that you, as citizens, tax payers and water users will desire, as this matter may progress, to be familiar with the factual background of the matter. The facts are attested by the records of Council, by numerous newspaper articles and stories, and by our records.

Schools To Assist In Waste Paper Salvage Campaign

COLLECTION DAY TO BE SET FOR ALL DISTRICTS

October 10 Set As Tentative Date For Opening Of Drive

McCLAIN MAPS PROGRAM

All Types Of Paper Needed For Remaking Into War Material

A county-wide waste paper salvage campaign, imperative in order to help keep the Container Corporation of America plant and other similar industries meeting war requirements throughout the Winter, is being mapped in Pickaway county. The campaign is being headed by Dan McClain, salvage chairman, who will work in cooperation with Norbert Cochran and Vernon Hawkes of the Container Corporation plant.

Mr. McClain said Saturday that much of the effort to obtain many tons of waste paper will be centered in the schools with all principals and superintendents to be asked to attend a meeting soon.

A definite collection day will be set up for each school, the day to be different in each village and township so that trucks to be supplied to haul paper may be available. The schedule will be announced as soon as Mr. McClain has had a chance to meet with school officials.

Nine Month Program

The program will be carried out over a nine month schedule, but it will remain intense during that period, much pressure being applied by paper users and school men to build up the vital supply.

Container Corporation men pointed out that good prices are being paid for paper, and that all proceeds may be used by the schools in whatever manner they wish. The money may be applied to any department or any treasury desired by the school officials.

Mr. McClain said that while paper is the item being sought that trucks will also pick up all other kinds of scrap taken to the schools by the pupils.

Although no definite date has been worked out for opening the campaign, October 10 has been agreed on as the most likely date for the drive to start.

Needed For War

"Millions of paperboard containers are being sent overseas to our fighting forces every week," Mr. Cochran pointed out. "Waste paper is one of the chief raw material sources from which these containers and shipping materials are made. To keep America's supply lines intact to our fighting forces and allies requires an endless stream of containers. These millions of containers sent overseas are not returned for re-use — an important contributing factor to the shortage."

Waste paper is being used in the manufacture of millions of containers weekly. Through scientific development, paper is being converted into bomb bands, practice bombs, wing tips, airplane signals, parachute flares, ammunition chests, shell protectors, shell containers and numerous other military essentials.

Types of paper needed by the mills are boxes, cartons, store bags, envelopes, corrugated paper, newspapers, magazines and waste basket paper.
